

Dedication

To my father, Buddy, who taught me so much about football...and taught me how important it was to love the game. I am where I am today because of you.

And to all the coaches and players who I've been so fortunate to work with so far in my career. Your combined talents have allowed me to enjoy a career that is greater than anything I could have imagined.

RR

To Danny Jordan, a mentor in every sense of the word. Thank you for making me better every day.

Acknowledgements

This book would not have been possible without the time, talents, and patience of a lot of people.

First and foremost, I've got to thank everyone at the Jets organization for supporting me and this project, and for making themselves available to meet with my writing crew as we crafted this book.

Woody Johnson, the greatest owner in the NFL, made time in his busy schedule to talk with us and offer some great glimpses into the inner workings of the team. He also trusted me enough to write this book, and I respect that.

Mike Tannenbaum, our General Manager, was also great about giving his time and sharing his insights, and I'm very grateful to him for that.

Bruce Speight, the Public relations director for the Jets, was a huge help, as well. I really need to thank everyone in his department; they do a phenomenal job for us every day and they don't always get the credit they deserve.

Laura Young, my right hand, has got to be one of the most long-suffering and accommodating people on earth. The work she put into lining up all the interviews and meetings is really what allowed this book to get off the ground.

My assistant coaches and players were wonderful, too, and I know I'm the luckiest SOB in all of professional football for the people I work with every day. I am so proud to be a Jet, and I hope that each one of my guys knows how happy I am to have them on my team.

I need to thank the folks at HBO for all their work on Hard Knocks, which really helped our season start off with a bang. The show gives fans a great look into the inner workings of a team, and I'm so glad they decided to profile the Jets this year.

Ian Kleinert, the agent for the book and a hell of a nice guy, did a bang-up job matching me with Doubleday, the best and bravest publishing house out there.

Jason Kaufman at Doubleday is the best editor ever, and I want to send out a huge thanks to his crew: his able assistant Rob Bloom, and the talented legal and copy editing team. I know this wasn't the easiest project you've ever had to work on, and I just wanted to let you know how deeply I appreciate everything you did. This book would not have happened without you and I really can't begin to tell you how much I appreciate your patience and dedication. You went above and beyond. From the bottom of my heart, thank you.

There are some great writers who cover the Jets for the New York-area media and their good work served as quite an amazing foundation for several portions of this project.

The writing team Don Yaeger put together of Jason Cole, Kalil Conway, Tiffany Brooks and Jim Henry really attacked this project with all their energy and it shows. Their help was instrumental in bringing together all the different parts needed to make this book work.

To my family: Michelle, Payton, and Seth – thank you all for your love, patience, and support. You're the greatest family anyone could ask for, and you're a hell of a lot better than I deserve. I love you all more than I can put into words.

To my brother Rob, who is now with the Cowboys – I am so proud to be your twin (and I'm sorry, again, about that press conference). To my brother Jim, thanks for putting up with all my antics and for being such a strong figure and someone I was always able to look up to. To my mom, you are the single most patient mother I know and I am so thankful for everything you did to help me get to this point. And to the one-and-only Buddy Ryan, you have been not only an amazing father but an amazing mentor. Thank you for teaching me all you know about coaching and for opening so many doors through your brilliant mind and unique leadership.

And, finally, to all the Jets fans out there: Thank you for your tireless support and enthusiasm. You are the greatest fans in the NFL, and without you, I don't have a job. Thanks for believing in your Jets. We've got a championship coming and I can't wait to celebrate it with you!
